

Dr. Paulina Yenbic Chan

Principal, Global Mutual Innovation Consortium (multiple countries)
Imperial College Ambassador, Imperial College London
Vice Chair, IEEE – Women In Engineering HK (2016)

Education:

PhD, DIC in EEE specialising in Communications at Imperial College London
MSc (Business) at Birkbeck College, University of London
PhD (honoris causa) International Open University - WHO/UNICEF Alma-Alta Declaration

Focus on applications and translational technologies into commercial products and services business in STEM & M(Management), Paulina directs and works with multidisciplinary professionals across continents to foster collaborations in innovative technologies, intelligent infrastructures and green energies.

Her career includes Managing Directors of AT&T/Lucent Technologies in the US, Asia/Pacific Region (expatriate) and the EU (expatriate); Project Director of Exxon/Mobil Corporation Headquarters, New York NY; China Regional General Manager (expatriate) of ICO Global Communications London and Beijing; and Senior Adviser of the EU for Hungary.

Paulina has chaired and published in many programmes and technical session committees of major national and international conferences, including the IEEE - ICC, GLOBCOM, NTC, DSP and INFOCOM. She is also the Champion of the Imperial College London Mentoring Programme to guide young scientists / technologists / engineers / managers-in-training to develop career paths and personal growth.

paulinaue@aol.com

+852 9527 1128

Skype: paulina.chan1